

Ex-teacher sues over his firing

Palm Beach Post Staff Reports

WEST PALM BEACH — A former Congress Middle School teacher was wrongfully terminated and faced discrimination and retaliation because he spoke out against the unfair treatment of black students, according to a lawsuit filed against the Palm Beach County School District.

Wayde Lee King, who was fired last year, charges school officials with creating a hostile work environment at the Boynton Beach school.

Schools spokesman Nat Harrington said the school district won't comment on pending litigation.